Preserve the New River Valley

Angela and Will Stanton with Preserve the New River Valley and Preserve Montgomery County, Va made a presentation requesting the Board of Supervisors to consider the adoption of a resolution requesting the Virginia Department of Environmental Quality ensure that guidelines for erosion and sedimentation control be met if the Mountain Valley Pipeline is certificated. A draft resolution prepared by Preserve the New River Valley was submitted to the Board of Supervisors to consider. A copy of the presentation is as follows:

A "Mega" Pipeline

- The 42" Mountain Valley Pipeline will be the largest ever built in this region
- Pipeline construction on this scale, across the landscape in our region, will result in the degradation of downstream water resources
- These "mega" pipelines require:
  - Excavation of 125-foot wide corridors over steep forested mountains
  - Heavy-duty transport roads and staging areas for large earth-moving equipment and pipe delivery
  - Extensive forest clearing, soil compaction, bedrock blasting, and excavation through streams, riparian areas, and wetlands

Presentation to the Montgomery County Board of Supervisors

Regulatory Environment

- While Virginia has put in force regulations to minimize erosion and sedimentation, as well as the alteration of stream channels and aquatic habitat due to uncontrolled runoff,
  - PIPELINE CONSTRUCTION IS EXEMPT FROM THE REGULATORY OVERSIGHT THAT APPLIES TO MOST OTHER LARGE CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS
  - Pipeline construction companies are largely self-regulating with respect to erosion and sediment control (E&SC) and stormwater management (SWM)
  - While most construction projects fall under the jurisdiction of local E&SC authorities, pipeline construction companies are instead subject to Annual Standards and Specifications
    - This allows the companies to perform their own compliance review and conduct their own inspection programs using company-hired plan reviewers and inspectors

Presentation to Montgomery County Board of Supervisors

The Role of the Virginia Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ)

- The Virginia DEQ has a responsibility to regulate pipeline construction to prevent the degradation of water resources – HOWEVER, the DEQ does NOT have a program in place to meet this responsibility
- Pipeline companies are required to prepare site-specific E&SC plans
- The DEQ has the authority to require submission of site-specific E&SC plans
- The DEQ has not allocated staff resources for plan review and has therefore not required plan submission
- As a result, no one other than company-hired plan reviewers are able to access and review the E&SC plans for compliance with state requirements

Presentation to Montgomery County Board of Supervisors

The Role of the Virginia Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ)

- The Virginia DEQ is supposed to review and approve Annual Standards and Specifications submitted by pipeline construction companies
- DEQ has not allocated staff resources for this task
- The DEQ has the authority to inspect pipeline construction projects, but does not do so unless there is a water-quality complaints from the public

Presentation to Montgomery County Board of Supervisors

A Local Example

- The Columbia Gas pipeline update project in Giles County (a 12" pipeline)
- The Virginia DEQ did not review E&SC plans for the project and conducted no inspections during construction
- The project was non-compliant with a number of Virginia E&SC requirements
- A Forest Service employee described having "never seen that much sedimentation off site before"

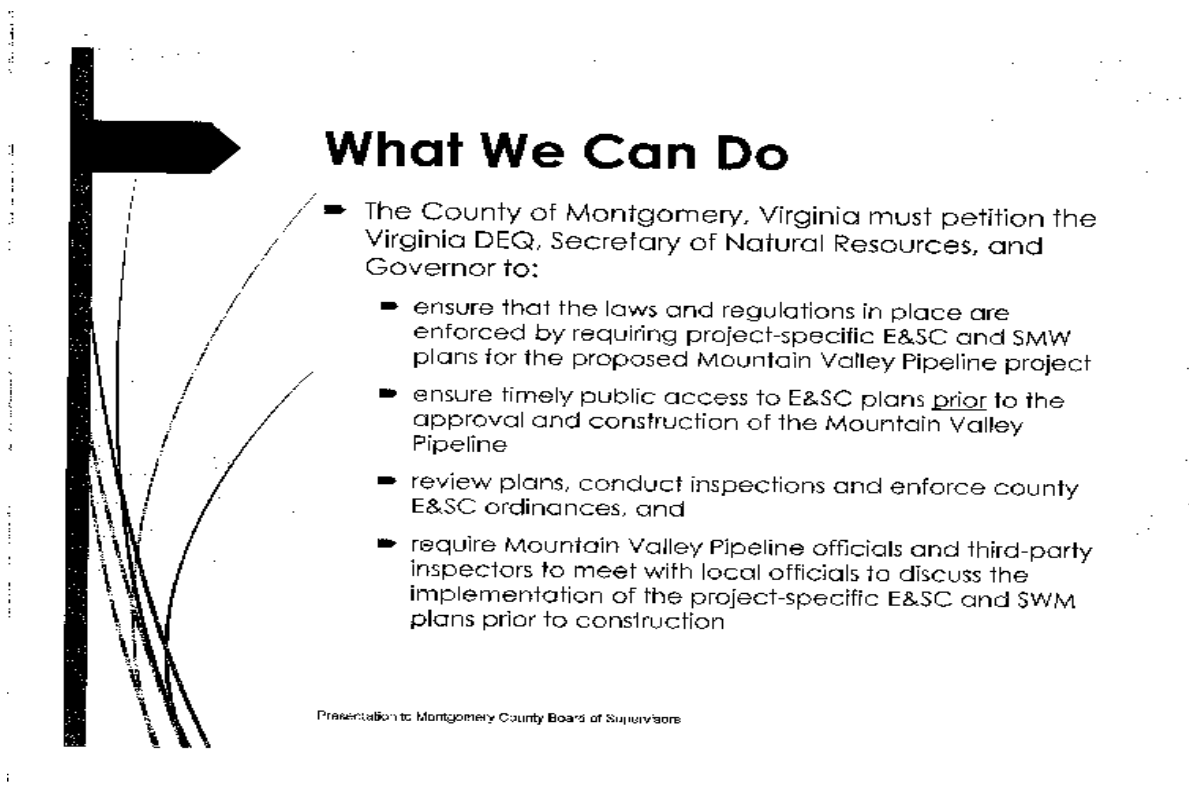

Presentation to Montgomery County Board of Supervisors

Self-Regulation

- Although pipeline companies are required to conduct their own inspection programs, inspection reports are typically kept in onsite construction trailers where they are not available for review by the public or local government representatives.
- Mountain Valley Pipeline states that they will protect our water resources and be transparent in their actions.
  - Based on interactions and reports filed to date, we have no confidence this will be the case.
- Thus, citizens and county government will not know if there are issues until AFTER the fact.

Presentation to Montgomery County Board of Supervisors

The County Administrator reported that staff will review the resolution submitted by the Preserve the New River Valley and will report back to the Board of Supervisors.
